Florence Dudley, Editor
Paul Barnes, Associate Editor
Mark Stansbury, Advisor
Physical manifestations are the foundations upon which the traditions of a college securely rest and from which orderly growth proceeds. Rapid adaptations to our changing world derive some essence of stability from these impressive structures in which they are transpired.

In fulfilling the most significant role in providing excellent comfort, facilities induce and encase that type of atmosphere in which development of students might best occur.

A Unifying Principle
Within Reach

The search for a unifying principle is the aim of all yearbook editors. Nevertheless, a more important and significant addition to any editor's production is to convey a story of experiences encountered by many individuals.

The pictures of you is our way of capturing your experiences, your years of college life, your achievements and your search for a unifying principle. We give to you the LANITE: your memories to cherish forever.

Our objectives are to provide the student with a broader understanding of his cultural heritage and thus enlarge the cultural perspective in his own view of life. We wish to acquaint the student with contemporary life and its problems, and at the same time enable him to build wholesome attitudes and to make intelligent choices.

By acquainting the student with great works of art, music, drama, and literature of all peoples and times, we hope that he will gain some degree of competence in at least one area. It is our aim to develop an appreciation for clear, forceful, verbal expression, and to achieve skill in the art of communication.
We shall provide encouragement and inducement for our best minds to accept teaching as a profession by showing its opportunities as well as its responsibilities. We will provide opportunities for students to enter a well-rounded program of studies designed to contribute to their scholastic background for the science of teaching as well as opportunities to develop in the art and technique of teaching in actual situations.

If we could create an awareness of the increasing responsibilities of the school to administer needs of children in all areas of growth and development, we could stimulate the student toward sound thinking and healthy attitudes concerning the teaching profession in regards to the purposes and goals of education that must be realized through the teaching process. We encourage our students to achieve sound scholarship in all areas of subject matter.
Our objectives are to provide students with the basic facts and principles necessary for an understanding and appreciation of his environment. We want to develop in the student an appreciation of the scientific method and to demonstrate its applicability to practical problems of life.

Our aims are to prepare students for the teaching of science and mathematics in the elementary and secondary schools and to prepare students for further work in graduate and professional schools.
Division of Social Sciences

Our objectives are to lead the students into an appreciation of the problems and achievements in the area of the social sciences. Our aims are to prepare students for professional training, law, social work, the ministry and teaching. We offer a major in the fields of Sociology.

History, and Religion. By giving the student a scientific knowledge of the nature and process of human society, we hope he will better understand human relations and the dynamics of a competitive society.

ALPHA KAPPA ALPHA SORORITY

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority is a national Greek-letter society, organized at Howard University in Washington, D.C., in January, 1908. In a period of fifty years, Alpha Kappa Alpha grew from one undergraduate group of nine members, to a national organization with an active membership of more than ten thousand women. Undergraduate chapters now draw members from more than 130 accredited colleges, and graduate members are organized into 169 chapters located in thirty-six of the fifty states, Liberia, West Africa and the Bahamas.

The present structure, character and personality of Alpha Kappa Alpha have been determined not only by the natural growth of the organization itself but by the pressures of changing conditions in the society in which she exists. As these two factors have changed, her membership standards—high scholarship, leadership, service, exemplary character—and her program goals have been continually and progressively reinterpreted, so that the personal benefits which members derive from their affiliation are balanced and counter-balanced against the values deriving from the organization to the community of which it is a part.

Today the influence and concern of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority extend far beyond campus gates and student interests.

Beta Chi Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Incorporated was brought to this campus in 1939.
DELTA SIGMA THETA SORORITY

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority is a greek-letter society, having 275 chapters located in 37 states including Alaska and the Republics of Haiti and Liberia with more than 35,000 members. The sorority was founded at Howard University on January 13, 1913 to establish a society to promote high cultural, intellectual, and moral standards among its members.

The high standards and ideals set by the founders have attracted to the ranks of the sorority thousands of women representing the finest in womanhood, whose individual and collective contributions to society have proved the importance of Delta Sigma Theta.
Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Incorporated, was organized November 12, 1922 on Butler University campus in Indianapolis, Indiana, by Mary Lou Gardner and six other school teachers: Dorothy Hanley Whiteside, Vivian White Marberry, Nannie Mae Johnson, Hattie Mae Dulin Redford, Bessie M. Downey Martin, and Cubena McClure. Since its founding, more than 120 undergraduate and graduate chapters have been established throughout the country.

The purpose of this sorority for women is expressed in its slogan, “Greater Service, Greater Progress.” Activities are encouraged that will further in every way possible the advantages of its members intellectually, morally, and socially.
