Lane College Community Drama Workshop

The idea for the Lane College Community Drama Workshop was conceived and inspired by John Grace. The purpose of the organization is to expose Black youngsters to the theatrical arts. They were given basic instruction in theatrical protocol staging, costumes, makeup, voices, etc. Their first production was excerpts from the Broadway Musical "The Me Nobody Knows."

The youngsters come from different socio-economic areas of the city. Their ages range from eight to thirteen. Members of the workshop are Joe Mitchell, Victor Toone, Sharon Giff, Vickie Henderson, Annette Proctor, Jeffery Keith Toone, Maurice Savage, Kenneth Ragland, Victoria Toone, and Denise Savage.

Of all the stones rare and fine,
The Black Pearl is one of a kind,
Engulfed in a world of peace and love,
The Black Pearl is kin to the Free
Black Rose.

The Black Pearl is true to her Black Man,
Crowning his face with her gentle hand,
Her love is taller than the tallest trees,
Her knees cool and soft like a summer breeze.
Goddess Black Pearl on an ebony throne,
With skin of silk in black tone,
Keep your head in the sky,
And the Black Pearl will never die.

Spotlight on Miss Lane College

SOUL SISTER SUPREME

Miss Lane College stands 5'4" and weighs a shapely 127 lb. A native of Memphis, Tennessee, she attended and graduated from Hamilton High School in 1968.

Here at Lane, she is a Health and Physical Education major. She is a member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Pan-Hellenic Council, Physical Education Club and the Lane College Marching Band.

Her hobbies include sewing, dancing, meeting people and interpreting music.

She dislikes people who play on a black woman's mind and a black man's talent. She likes people who are frank and straightforward.

To the next Miss Lane College, she says, "It is the duty of the future Miss Lane College to be so together in her awareness of the things occurring around Lane that she'll be able to discuss any issue without delayed thoughts."

Rayetta Long Soul Sister Supreme 1972-73
Bishop Isaac Lane, Founder of the College, was born a slave in Madison County on March 2, 1831.

When he was twenty years of age, he professed a belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. At twenty-two, he was licensed to exhort the Gospel. A fine distinction was made between those who exhorted and those who preached.

Reverend Lane began a ministry that was to last more than eighty years. During this period, historians cannot estimate the number of churches that he built. What stands, in addition to his matchless church expansion program, is the college upon a hill in East Jackson that began as the C.M.E. High School. A charter was obtained from the state and the name was changed to Lane Institute.

In 1877, during the Presidency of the Reverend T. J. Saunders, Lane Institute developed to the status of a college.

When Bishop Lane died on December 5, 1937, he was said to have been the oldest living bishop in the nation.

THE LANE COLLEGE DRAGONS

Is he or isn't he an Indian, only his barber knows for sure.

I'll see if I can sneak between his legs.

Today, we call him — Coach you need.
Isn’t that what we don’t want us — out!

Aren’t you glad you see Die?

2 Points for Love Child.

Up, Up and Away!

And just where do I go from here?

So high I got to go around him!

Foul. Foul. Foul don’t be no mean!

A look at the brothers in basketball...

Jimmie Bethea, defensive half-back, is from High Point, North Carolina. He made first team All-Conference. Considered by many coaches as a possible professional ball player.

James Wolfe is from Marianna, Arkansas. He made All-Conference and All-District. He plays middle guard.

Charles Nelson is from Memphis, Tennessee. He plays defensive half-back. He made All-Conference and All-District.

Joe Smith is from Miami, Florida. He plays split end. He made first team All-Conference.

A look at the brothers in football...

Ernest Lee Jones, a freshman guard from Whiteville, Tennessee, averaged 16 points per game.

Joseph Malone, a sophomore forward from Gallatin, Tennessee, averaged 17 points per game.

Willie Martin, a freshman forward from Denmark, Tennessee, averaged 17 points per game.

Allan Poole, a junior guard from Erie, Pennsylvania, averaged 15 points per game.

Larry Tutt, a sophomore center from Carbondale, Illinois, averaged 16 points per game.
THE MAN
Behold the poem that I now tell,
A poem of a man whom you may know well,
Or may this man you have not met,
He'll change your life, you see, I'll bet.

This man has been dead for many years;
Yet he lives on, and even now he hears
The cries of the people who believe him to be
The savior of lost souls like you and me.

Now I don't profess to be good and right
And I don't claim to have seen the light;
Yet this man's teachings, we must attest
To this very day are indeed the best.

There is no better rule we could matter
I think none better than "love thy brother."" Nor is there a better thought to conceive
I think none better than "only believe."

When times get tough and money gets tight,
When times get rough and nothing goes right,
When all is up and there's nowhere to turn,
The man should be our chief concern.

When you get tired of running the race,
When you don't feel you can keep the pace,
When you can see only, one way out,
This man you can trust without a doubt.

Who is this man now you may ask?
Who is the man I now am ask?
His name is Jesus; don't try that be
Enough to satisfy you and me.

For it was not his purpose to make his name
A bearer of any world-wide fame,
But his purpose, rather, as blessed from above,
Was to instill in a man that thing called love.

FREEDOM TIME

The clock ticks it's a quarter to three, 1972, isn't that the day we were supposed to be free?
Or was it in April, quarter to five, 68? When they killed the King, I remember that was supposed to be my Black Liberation day, wasn't it?
But maybe when my Black god Malcolm was killed ten to nine in 65, wasn't supposed to throw off the shackles of oppression that day too?

I know, when Nat and Gabriel and Toussaint said we're throwing off those slave bonds that was the day of my emancipation!
I'm today, I am not free and I know I am not going to be free till whitey treats me like a man, and stops mauling my leaders because they acted like one.

“SO GET READY”

L. C. students, you better watch out.
I see something coming you don’t even think about.

The failure you’re running out to be.
Gettin’ so high you can hardly see.

Gettin’ high might be fine,
But it won’t get you out of school on time.

Stay off the dope and hit the books,
And you won’t find yourself gettin’ hooked.

Stay off the wine and get involved,
Learn your major, graduate and get a job.

Beer is fine I must say,
But it won’t help you come May . . .
